*Chapter 1: Prologue ****

It was a beautiful day over Station Square as a man dress in a white lab coat, black trousers was heading towards a big warehouse on the far end of Station Square that goes towards the sea. He'd just gotten back from watching a fight between Sonic the hedgehog and doctor Eggman and of course Sonic's friends were there to help.

The man arrived at a metal door to a warehouse and he typed in a combination of numbers into a keypad which opened the door. He strolled inside his hands behind his back, he briefly glanced at his failed inventions, but he soon ignored them and continued to walk to a large screen computer that was hung up on the wall.

A large control panel also sat below it allowing him to use the computer. He sat down on a large black computer chair and smirked up at the screen. "Such fascinating creatures." He muttered as he began typing on the control panel.

Soon pictures of Sonic and his friends appeared on separate bits of the screen. The mans eyes were drawn to the blue hedgehog then to the pink one. "Just how can that small blue hedgehog run so fast? And that pink one she produce hammers just out of nowhere. Many of the others have special fighting skills, but she is the most usual out of them all." He mused as he studied the pictures were the pink hedgehog held a hammer.

"She'll be much easier to capture than that blue hedgehog, I haven't any hope in capturing him, no matter how much I'd like to." He sighed slightly. He soon got up out of his chair and walked towards something that was covered up in a sheet. He unveiled it to reveal a robot. "with this robot which is loosely base off Doctor Eggman's robot designs I will capture that pink hedgehog." He chuckled evilly.

He reached into his pocket and brought out a remote and he pressed a button. The robot lit up and started to moved. The man pressed another button which opened the door to the warehouse. "Go forth my robot, bring me that pink hedgehog. And don't come back till you have her!" He yelled as he stepped outside to watch the machine fly off. He smirked as he walked back inside closing the door behind him.
